SINGLE CITATION MATCHER

Remember those times when you could not find a particular journal, issue, or citation for that critical article for your research? Need help verifying that incomplete journal citation?

Now there is PubMed's Single Citation Matcher. If the article has been indexed in Medline, this fill-in-the-blank form allows you to enter what information you have to locate a record for a specific single article, or items indexed from a particular volume or issue of a journal. You do not need to fill in all the blanks. If you do not get the article you are looking for the first time, try filling in different blanks - only one incorrect piece of information will throw off your search. If author, issue, and year do not work the first time, try a title word, volume, and beginning page, the second time.

Single Citation Matcher is available on the PubMed website at <http://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pubmed> Scroll down on the sidebar until you see Single Citation Matcher.

This is a quick, easy way for verifying those partial journal citations that used to take forever to track down.

ADOPTION

The Administration for Children and Families' Adoption and Foster Care Analysis and Reporting System was developed in response to a need for national data on children who are in state foster care or who have been adopted through state agencies. It is a national data collection system on the characteristics of children in foster care, foster parents, adopted children, and adoptive parents. This data is used for program management, policy development, monitoring child welfare programs, short and long-term budget projections, and trend analyses for short and long term planning.

THE BALTIMORE ECA FOLLOW-UP STUDY

The NIMH Epidemiologic Catchment Area (ECA) Survey, carried out in the early 1980's, was the largest, most comprehensive personal interview survey of psychiatric disorders ever conducted in the U.S. The survey sample involved over 20,000 adult residents, aged 18 years and older, from five metropolitan areas, including Baltimore, Maryland. At the Baltimore site, 3481 individuals were interviewed in 1981 as part of this survey. Between 1993-1996, the entire Baltimore ECA cohort was traced for follow-up. Of the 3481 original respondents, 848 had died, 415 could not be located and 298 refused to participate. 1920 of the original participants were located and re-interviewed using essentially the same questionnaire that was administered in 1981. The Baltimore ECA follow-up study thus provided an opportunity for population- based assessment for new cases of psychiatric and substance abuse disorders from the original survey population.

FETAL DEATH

Fetal death is defined as death prior to the complete expulsion or extraction of a fetus from its mother during pregnancy. It has become an important public health issue, since 19,000 fetal deaths occur in the U.S. each year. Fetal death rates are higher for women with less education and for those who receive no prenatal care during pregnancy. The NCHS has published data on fetal deaths in their publication Vital and Health Statistics Series 20, Numbers 30 and 31.

MANAGING HIGH CHOLESTEROL THROUGH GUIDELINES

Cholesterol, a fatty substance produced by the body, is carried in the bloodstream where it becomes attached to protein resulting in lipoprotein. Low density lipoprotein (LDL) is associated with increased risk of coronary heart disease whereas high density lipoprotein (HDL) is associated with lower risk of coronary heart disease. Guidelines have been developed to assist the management of high LDL levels. However, in a recent study supported by AHRQ, it was found that many primary care physicians do not follow prevention guidelines for managing high LDL levels among their patients with atherosclerosis.

RESIDENTIAL TREATMENT PROGRAMS FOR PREGNANT WOMEN AND MOTHERS

Drug and alcohol dependent women who are pregnant or who have children significantly reduce their alcohol or drug use as well as criminal behavior following their participation in residential treatment programs. Findings show that use of crack cocaine declined from 51% of the women during the six months before treatment to 27% during the 6 months after treatment. Also, rates of premature delivery, low birth weight and infant mortality were improved for women who participated in the long-term residential treatment programs. SAMHSA's Center for Substance Abuse Treatment has funded a study which evaluated residential treatment programs for pregnant women or women with infants and children.

GUIDE TO LIBRARY RESOURCES

PHYSICIAN CHARACTERISTICS AND DISTRIBUTION IN THE US. American Medical Association, AMA Press, Chicago, IL, 2001/2. Ref-Gen W 76 D634

This source presents extensive information on all physicians located in the United States and its Possessions. It contains historical as well as current data on the US physician population which provides essential information for health services research, program planning, and policy development. Data has been compiled from the American Medical Association's Physician Masterfile, maintained by the Division of Survey and Data Resources. The five chapters in this book include:

- Physician characteristics (age, sex, major professional activity, primary speciality)
- Physician distribution
- Analysis of professional activity by speciality and geographic region
- Primary care specialties
- Physician trends

THE NATIVE NORTH AMERICAN ALMANAC. Gale Group, New York, NY. Ref-Gen E 75 N2138

This book contains information on all aspects of the Native peoples of North America. The first seventeen chapters are composed of signed essays, annotated directory information, and documentary excerpts. The final chapter contains more than 500 concise biographies of prominent Native North Americans. Topics in this source include:

History and historical landmarks	Environment
Law and legislation	Activism
Education	Economy
Languages	Health
Literature	Women
Gender relations	Demography
